First International Summer School on GNSS: A Worldwide Utility

Institute of Geodesy and Navigation brings first Satnav-Summer School into being

The First International Summer School on Global Navigation Satellite Systems closed successfully on Sunday 9th September. Organized by the Institute of Geodesy and Navigation in cooperation with Stanford University (USA) and École Nationale Supérieure de l' Aéronautique et de l' Espace (Toulouse) Summer School started on September 5th in Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, Germany.

About 50 attendees joined the unique event with its highly qualified lecturers as Bradford Parkinson (Father of GPS), Rainer Grohe (former Executive Director of Galileo Joint Undertaking) and Peter L. Levin (Founder and President of DAFCA Inc.).

The main goal of the Summer School was to educate the Phd Students, postdoctoral researchers and engineers interdisciplinarily. Another Satnav Summer School is planned for 2008.
